

ChildPlayWorks NZ Clinical Play Therapy Training Programme

Birds fly, fish swim, children play
Garry Landreth

Play is the natural world of a child. In their play a child can express their thoughts and feelings and come to an understanding of their world.

ChildPlayWorks offers a comprehensive Child-Centered Play Therapy (CCPT) training programme in New Zealand.

CCPT is a specialised way of working therapeutically with children. This unique approach is based on solid theory and is one of the most thoroughly researched theoretical models of play therapy in the world.

CCPT could be equally termed 'Emotional Regulation Therapy' because of the clear emotional regulation outcomes during the process of therapy. There is also a natural alignment of CCPT with neuroscience research in the field of PLAY alongside the nervous system with Jaak Panksepp (play circuitry); S. Porges (neuroception of safety) and in the field of Trauma with Bruce Perry (neurosequential model).

ChildPlayWorks offers solid, New Zealand-based clinical training in the specific modality of Child-Centered Play Therapy (CCPT). The 3-stage training programme can be completed within 3 years. Our training is of interest to counsellors, social workers, teachers, early childhood educators, psychotherapists, psychologists, art therapists, occupational therapists, speech and language therapists, mental health nurses (including those in their final year of study in these areas) as well as all others who work with children. For some, additional study in counselling may be required.

Stage 1: Introductory

The Wonderful World of Child-Centered Play Therapy: a 5-day workshop

The theoretical model and philosophical framework of CCPT is explored as well as a basic understanding of the dynamics and importance of the unique therapeutic relationship. Facilitative, relationship-building ways of responding to children and core CCPT skills are introduced in role play demonstrations and these are developed in experiential role plays. The playroom and its toys are introduced.

Child development and attachment is put within the context of CCPT. Understanding of this is consolidated in case examples, role play demonstrations, and in experiential role plays using skills already developed.

Therapeutic stages and themes in CCPT are introduced. Development of play therapy skills and further facilitative ways of responding to children are explored.

N.B. Stage 1 is also offered as a standalone professional development workshop.

Stage 2: Readiness for Practice / Establishing and Consolidating Practice

(a) Deepening and Strengthening the Therapeutic Relationship: a 5-day workshop

A focus on dynamics in a beginning clinical context of CCPT. Self as therapist is explored and there is a strong experiential focus on advancing and strengthening play therapy skills and relational ways of being with children which were initially developed in Stage 1. These include responding to challenges in the playroom and taking part in role play with a child.

Guest presenter Dr. Wendy Kelly, Ph.D., (Clinical Psychologist) presents a 1-day workshop – 'The Effects of Trauma on Children's Attachment Relationships' (also a standalone, professional development workshop). Clinical practice issues are further explored, and trainees can apply to begin supervised practice for their therapeutic work with children in a playroom setting. These issues include developing a relationship with parents/caregivers; the initial parent/caregiver interview and assessment process; and reflectivity and documentation around sessions.

(b) Issues in Clinical Practice: a 5-day workshop

Clinical practice is further explored and strengthened, and peer support is encouraged. Clinical issues include working with parents/caregivers as therapeutic partners and strengthening the parent/child relationship; typical problems and issues in CCPT; and determining therapeutic process.

Guest presenters Andrea Broadhurst (Occupational Therapist; practicing Psychotherapist) and Heather Chambers (Consultant Child Psychotherapist) present Heather's 'Adult Exploration of Attachment Interview: In search of internal working models (AEAI)' in a 1-day workshop (also a standalone, professional development workshop).

Modules include DVD material from highly respected leaders in the field of CCPT and case material. There is a strong emphasis on play therapy skill development, role play demonstrations and experiential role plays, and personal reflective activities.

Stage 3: Advanced Practice

Stage 3a: Issues in Advanced Clinical Practice (5-day workshop intensive)

Included in this workshop are two in-depth presentations: ChildPlayWorks presents their model for working with parents/caregivers and their child together in the playroom to strengthen their relationship.

Dr Bill Nordling presents his series of three 90-minute interactive presentations 'Working with Parents' and these form a solid foundation for the all-important aspect of developing effective, supportive working relationships with parents/caregivers.

(b) The Emergent Child-Centered Play Therapist: (online)

Accessing online presentations with: Jeff L. Cochran, Ph.D., NCC, LMHC & Nancy H. Cochran, MA, CAS, LMHC.

Online Forum participation: Group reflective discussions on the online presentations; supporting each other's work with children and linking theory to practice. An individual case study completes the theoretical component of The Emergent Child-Centered Play Therapist.

Internationally recognised Child Centered Play Therapy training provider

ChildPlayWorks certification programme in play therapy has been formally recognized by IDEALS/NIRE – the oldest and among the most prestigious certifying bodies in CCPT in the United States as being “equivalent in quality.”

This designation, which has been granted to fewer than five programmes outside of the US, allows graduates of ChildPlayWorks to be eligible for admittance to their advanced certification programmes in CCPT Supervision and in Filial Therapy.

We are thankful to everyone in the ChildPlayWorks community because it was the quality of our students, training staff, and supervisors that allowed us to receive this distinction.
